U. S. Not Asked to Aid In Blocking Neutral Waters to U-Boats

authoritatively to-day that the British government had never proposed to the United States joint measures for bringing to an end the use of neutral territorial waters by German war vessels. It was indicated that no negotiations are being conducted at present concerning representations that have been o ight at some future time be made to orway, Sweden, Denmark and Holland encerning such use of their marine British North Sea naval patrol, and it is not thought likely here that British will permanently tolerate such a situation. It is known that German submarines skirt the Norwegian coast and thus gain access to the North Sea, eluding the enemy patrols.

Naval experts in England have recommended the bottling up of the Skagerrack and the Cattegat, but to do this the consent of Norway, Sweden and Denmark would have to be obtained. The United States, up to the present time, at least, has not been associated with any efforts made in this direction by England.
